I enjoyed using this program for years until I started working for IBM as a graphic designer. I was given my first PC and started doing my own work again using Microsoft Office. The time had come that I wanted to upgrade to a more professional program. I titled all my photoshop files with the year they were taken and kept them all in labeled folders. I downloaded Photoshop and followed the easy instructions of "ECI natural mode." I increased my screen resolution and started making my photos and found the controls to be easy to use. I did some adjusting and it was easy to create web sites and adjust my photos after I posted them. I was happy that the program was so user friendly. I thought I finally had a program that I liked. It was then that I upgraded my computer and went through the process of upgrading my third time. I found that I couldn't find my files. I was the only one using this computer and I needed to find the hard way to get to EFI Stobe. I had a good idea of where the file should be on the computer but it was not there. I was not very happy with how I had to do that because it didn't tell me how many files were to be up to a specified I would say around 20 I originally had around 400. I had to look all over the place. That was too frustrating and I went back to using the old format. The programs were not compatible and I recently learned that there is now an upgrade and that the file size is ten times what it would be in the old format. I really wanted to be proficient in computer at one point in my life so this is why I learned all I could for the basic and almost how to do everything.
